Pass through our wooden entrance gates and turn right back immediately across the road leaving Black Hall on your right-hand side. Continue along the road under the woodland passing by a white cottage on your right-hand side.

As the road starts to head uphill, you pass a barn conversion and a further house, Cwm Cole. At the top of the bank, you pass some farm building to your right before heading downhill through the woodland.

When you reach the bottom of the hill, the road splits. Keep right until you pass another house and farm buildings. Cross a bridge and turn right up through a steep woodland.

Continue this road until you reach the very top. You will see the carpark to your right-hand side.

From here, you can cross back over the road and walk directly opposite the carpark along an old Drovers Road with fence lines either side of you, or you can walk towards the Offas Dyke.

To reach the Offa's Dyke from the carpark. Head away from the road, with a small plantation on your left. You will go through some gate ways, but you can continue along here until you pass by a Dutch Barn (open sided barn) and sorting pens for sheep. The Offa's Dyke continues ahead towards Knighton but does become more difficult with the valley now beginning to fall and rise.

When you have walked as far as you wish, head back to your car and turn left back down towards Llanfair Waterdine.
